SOUTHERN UTAH'S INSPIRATION

TO WHAT is southern Utah most ly indebted for the industrial awakening that is so noticeable upon every hand the past year or two? For the steady extension of the cultivated area; for the better methods employed in the cultivation of the soil; for the improvement of the grade of stock and other animals that are raised; for planting of large areas of hitherto untillied land to corn, and the feeding of large numbers of hogs—what, we say, has furnished this inspiration? And our answer is given without fear of contradiction—the B. A. C. And yet the work of this institution has scarcely begun. The farms which are to solve the local problems for the farmers and pilot the way to better methods of agriculture are as yet in but little better condition and control than some of the surrounding farms; but the influence for better and more intelligent endeavor along these lines has already been felt. As time goes by, and the program mapped out for the B. A. C. farms is worked out, they will be one of the most inspiring sights to farmers to be found anywhere. Already they are beginning to respond to the improved methods of cultivation, and are an object lesson well worthy of inspection and investigation by the farmers and livestock growers of this section of the state.

And the one most important lesson yet taught on the irrigated tract adjoining the school is this: That up to date, the available water supply has not been made to do more than about one-fourth its proper duty. It has been conclusively shown that one summer watering on average soil is all that is required for best results in the cultivation of small grains. It has been proven that two good cuttings of alfalfa can be grown in the majority of our fields with only winter water. In the past, at least four times this amount of water has been applied to land having primary water right. This means, then, that with the proper economical use of the present water supply nearly four times as much land can be cultivated and almost four times as much farm products produced. And this without entering the domain of arid farming, which affords almost unlimited possibilities.

This new method will be quite as beneficial to the old method farmer as to the homeseeker who may be afforded an opportunity of acquiring a farm, for he will be saved a lot of hard labor now employed in unnecessary irrigation of his crops. The sooner we avail ourselves of the information furnished by the local experimental farms, the sooner we can expect to double or treble our population and add to the general prosperity of this section of the country.

THE GRAND CANYON HIGHWAY.

READERS of The Record will recall the fact that June first was the date fixed for the completion of the State and Grand Canyon Highway, and the opening of the route to tourist travel. This was the date worked to by the state convicts between the Bellevue Blackridge and Hurricane, and the date kept in mind by the people all along the line of the proposed road; but June 1 found the road in anything but good shape for automobiles, and another month and a half slipped by and still there are portions of the road that we could not conscientiously recommend to automobilists—particularly about a 10 mile strip of sand between the Hurricane hill and the Cedar Ridge, in the direction of Short Creek. This portion of the road lies in Arizona, and while it has been graded, the grade consists of loose sand which is practically impassable for automobiles. The road was surveyed on this route in order to accommodate the settlers on farms along the route, notwithstanding it was feared that the road could not be surfaced and made good this season. From one to three thousand dollars expended on the lower road, farther south, would have placed it in very fair condition to take care of the tourist travel the present summer, and then the permanent road via Short Creek could have been completed in time for next summer. As the matter now stands, the road over this portion of the route is no better than it was ten years ago, and it would be folly to induce automobilists to attempt it, for each one making the trip would become a knocker of the route when he returned home.

The Record regrets this unfortunate condition and trusts that some remedy can be speedily applied. We are credibly informed that a few days work with teams and scrapers would remove the high centers from the lower road, which, with a few rocks that could be thrown out, offer the principal obstacles to its use. If the state of Arizona cannot be induced to perform this small work, the nearest settlements ought to take it up and enjoy the advantage of a part of the automobile tourist travel to the coast passing through that section, according to the original program.

I REMEMBER.

I remember, I remember the house where I was born, the little window where the sun came peeping in at morn. You'd hardly know the old place now, for dad is up-to-date and the farm is scientific, from the back lot to the gate. The house and barn are lighted with bright acetylene, the engine in the laundry is run by gasoline; we have silos, we have dynamos and things, a telephone for gossip and a phonograph that sings. The hired man has left us—we miss his homely face—a lot of college graduates are working in his place. There's an engineer and fireman, a chauffeur and a vet., 'lectrician and mechanic. Oh, the farm's run right, you bet! The little window where the sun came peeping in at morn now brightens up a bathroom that cost dad a car of corn. Our milkmaid is pneumatic and she's sanitary, too, but dad gets fifteen cents a quart for milk that once brot' two. Our cattle came from Jersey and the hogs are all Duroc, the sheep are Southdown beauties and the chickens Plymouth Rock. To have the best of everything, that is our aim and plan, for dad not only farms it, but he's a business man.—E. F. McIntyre.

The Ball-Player's Prayer.

Lord, help me to play the game. It matters not to you whether I am talented or poor in natural gifts; wealthy or starving; a leader among men or a simple follower, so that I play the game as you would have it played. Help me to keep my eye on the ball, that the curves of temptation may not deceive me. Keep my feet in the path of righteousness, that I may touch second and third on my way 'round the bases. Help me to beat out my bunts, and hold me that I stray not too far from base when the catcher is ready to peg me. Count not my foul balls against me, O Lord, for the batting eye sometimes goes wrong. 'Though the intention is right. Help me in the pinches, Lord, because a good bingle might bring my brother home. Let not the music of the fans keep my eye from the ball, nor the enticements of the slabman draw me away from the need of a clean single with a man on second. Help me, O Lord, to bat over 300, because my eyes are on the big league for eternity, even while I sojourn here among the bush-leaguers.

NEWS FROM HOME.

Through many years of city life And daily office grind, I've grown away from rural ways, Yet much delight I find In reading, when it's sent to me, (My mother sends it down) The ever-welcome little sheet That comes from my home town. Full faithfully it chronicles The little town's affairs; The news is hardly of the kind For which the great world cares.

The births, the deaths, the visitings, All duly it records, The Ladies' Aid lawn festival An item large affords. "The M. E. Sunday School picnic Was held at Willow Springs," "Hank Holloway an eight-ounce peach Into our sanctum brings;" "This year's alfalfa crop looks good," "The local base ball team Will play with Parowan Saturday." And items by the reams.

I see again the small town square; The stores along "Main street;" The gunting crowds bound stationward, The "fast express" to meet; The old postmaster, with his cane, And suit of faded blue; His pretty daughter Roseline, The village beauty, too. The group around the "general store" Grave matters they discuss, While grandly round the corner swings The "Palace Hotel" bus.
